The brick footings of a kiln are situated on a terrace on the SE side of the quarry. The 2nd edition of the OS 6-inch map (Edinburghshire 1906, sheet xi.SW) shows the works as in use, with a row of three kilns in a location corresponding to the surviving kiln, and a railway branch line to the SW. The works were still in use by the date of the revised edition of the same map (Lanarkshire 1922, sheet xiv). Nothing now remains visible of an 'Old Quarry' (CSW 3579, NT 0130 5763) and a building (CSW 3580, NT 0130 5746) shown on the 2nd edition of the OS 6-inch map (Edinburghshire 1893, sheet xi.SW)

65	Woolfords	Lime Kilns; Quarries	NT05NW 50	Non-designated heritage asset	300050	656490	South Lanarkshire	There are two lime clamps and two disused quarries by a small burn about 350m WSW of Woolfords farmsteading. Across the burn to the SE there is a second disused quarry (CSW 3599, NT 0007 5646). Both quarries are depicted as unannotated hollows on the 1st edition of the OS 6-inch map (Lanarkshire 1864, sheet xiv), and they are again shown on the 2nd edition (1899). The kilns are not depicted on either map, although the 2nd edition does mark a kiln a short distance to the W at NS 9997 5650 (CSW 2992).
66	Mosshat Burn	Spoil Tip	NS95NE 77	Non-designated heritage asset	297900	655780	South Lanarkshire	The 2nd edition of the OS 6-inch map (Lanarkshire 1899, sheet xiv) depicts a substantial area of spoil to the W of the Mosshat Burn, about 450m ESE of Mountainblaw farmsteading. No buildings or other features are depicted. The site now falls within a forestry plantation and was not visited during fieldwork in 1994, although vertical APs taken in 1988 (All Scotland Survey 513/88 frames 053-4) show that it survives in a clearing.
67	Mosshat Burn	Stell; Sheepfold (Period Unassigned)	NS95NE 78	Non-designated heritage asset	298110	655600	South Lanarkshire	There is an oval stell on a slight knoll above the W bank of the Mosshat Burn to the N of the road between Haywood and Burnfoot. It measures 6.5m WNW-ESE by 6m transversely within a turf bank 1.1m thick and 0.4m high. The entrance is on the ESE.
68	Harryfoothill	Farmstead; Miners Row (possible); Building	NS95NE 79	Non-designated heritage asset	298200	655660	South Lanarkshire	The remains of this farmstead, which may have been reused to house miners working the adjacent pit, stand in a pasture field in the angle of a bend in the Mosshat Burn, about 650m NW of Burnfoot farmsteading. The 1st edition of the OS 6-inch map (Lanarkshire 1864, sheet xiv) depicts 'Harryfoothill' as a single building, shorter than the surviving ruins, with a well and two small enclosures, and it is described in the Name Book as 'a small farmsteading one story in height, thatched and in good repair' (ONB 1864). The 2nd edition of the map (1899) shows a longer building, with several small enclosures. It may be that the farmstead had been enlarged or rebuilt to house miners at the adjacent pit (NS95NE 80). The pit was already disused by the time of the 2nd edition, and by the next revision (1910, published 1922) the building was in ruins.

69	Harryfoothill	Coal Mine	NS95NE 80	Non-designated heritage asset	298270	655700	South Lanarkshire	The 2nd edition of the OS 6-inch map (Lanarkshire 1899, sheet xiv) depicts an 'Old Shaft' at the NE edge of an area of spoil immediately E of Harryfoothill farmstead (NS95NE 79). A hollow now marks the site of the shaft; it lies to the NE of a two-phase bing, the tip of the earlier bing protruding through the SE corner of the later spoil tip. Visited by RCAHMS (SDB) 15 July 1994
70	Mosshat Burn	Sheepfold	NS95NE 81	Non-designated heritage asset	298760	656770	South Lanarkshire	There is a rectangular drystone sheepfold on open moorland to the E of the Mosshat Burn, about 1.4km NW of Wester Mosshat farmstead. It is depicted on the 1st edition of the OS 6-inch map (Lanarkshire 1864, sheet xiv).
71	Woolfords	Lime Clamps; Limestone Quarry	NS95NE 82	Non-designated heritage asset	298760	656770	South Lanarkshire	There are two lime clamps next to a quarry at the edge of a field about 500m NW of Woolfords farmstead. The clamps stand side by side on the E edge of the quarry. The WNW clamp (CSW 7073) measures 5.5m square within a bank up to 1.5m high; the ESE clamp (CSW 7074) measures 6.5m by 5m internally within a faced bank 1.5m high. They both open towards the SSW. The quarry-pit (CSW 2991) is subrectangular, with upcast on its E and W sides. The quarry and the kilns are shown on the 2nd edition of the OS 6-inch map (Lanarkshire 1899, sheet xiv), but three kilns, not two, are depicted. An L-shaped arrangement of tarmac strips c. 5m wide extends some 60m to the NNW and then a similar distance to the WSW, with narrower paths extending from each long strip to join at a point in the interior of the angle. The WSW-ENE alinged strip is surrounded by a 10-2m wide area of close-trimmed grass. A sign set back from the road some distance N of the access track identifies the site as the flying-ground of "West Calder Aeromodellers". Were it not for the scale of the arrangement of features, the site which is visible on aerial photographs might be mistaken for a full-sized airfield. 								the low ridge between the headwaters of what is named on later maps as the Vein Syke and the Bog Burn, the upper reaches of which now form part of Cobbinshaw Reservoir (see WoSASPIN 18300). The Shothhead site may have been affected by creation of the reservoir in 1817, but is likely to have been abandoned some time earlier as it is not shown on James Knox's 1812 "Map of the Shire of Edinburgh, or County of Mid Lothian". Information from NLS online mapping resources. It is not known whether Roy's representation of this site records the last phase of a declining medieval rural settlement, or depicts a short-lived or failed attempt at small-scale agricultural settlement in the early modern period which was overtaken by either climatic deterioration or by the process of farm aggregation during the Agricultural Revolution. The site now lies under a commercial conifer plantation, and is likely to have been heavily compromised by forestry ploughing. Entered WoSAS (HMcB) 01/06/2015

Roy's map depicts at least one large building and what may be three outbuildings and an enclosure at the W end of an area of arable or improved land lying at the headwaters of what is named on later maps as the Vein Syke. The Wester Shothhead site is likely to have been abandoned during the second half of the 18th century, as it is not shown on James Knox's 1812 "Map of the Shire of Edinburgh, or County of Mid Lothian". 77	Lawhead	Small Cairns	NT05NW 7	Non-Statutory Register Code: V	303450	655150	South Lanarkshire	At least twenty-five small cairns are situated at a height of 335m OD, on the crest of a ridge 150m NE of the ruins of Upper Lawhead. At the highest point there is a cairn 6.0m in diameter and 0.6m in height, surmounted by an Ordnance Survey triangulation station; attached to its NE side is a small turf enclosure of uncertain date and purpose, which measures 4.0m in diameter within a bank 1.6m thick and 0.3m high. It is likely that many cairns have been destroyed by the large disused quarry that occupies much of the SW end of the ridge, for to the S and E of the quarry there are four small cairns, and to the NE a further twenty-two which range in size from an insubstantial scatter of stone less than 2.0m in diameter and 0.2m high to a cairn 3.4m in diameter and 0.4m high. The larger cairns are not composed wholly of stone, having a considerable proportion of earth in their make-up (cf NT05SE 3). Centred NT 0345 5515. A group of small grass-covered stony mounds occupy about 5.0 hectares of gently sloping ground. They are similar in size and general appearance to other mounds in the area and are probably field clearance cairns. There is no trace of lynchets or field banks and no apparent evidence of other associated features. The origin and purpose of the enclosure adjacent to the site of the former triangulation pillar is uncertain but it may have been a small shelter. Centred NT 0260 5232. These "cairns", situated in pasture, were noted as field clearance heaps by OS in 1971. There were no indications of lynchets. (However, cf NT05SE 3).
